Transition Resources for Students who Are Visually Impaired Blind including Those with Multiple Disabilities and Deafblind

Infants, children, and youth with visual impairment/blindness including those with multiple disabilities and deafblindness experience numerous challenges and transitional stages as they develop and learn.

There is a new online listing of transition resources available on the website of the Missouri School for the Blind. This listing includes links to articles by students and families; information on assessment; early intervention to early childhood, middle school, and post-secondary transitions; state and national resources; planning calendars; and, videos and webcasts. The transition to post-secondary activities is particularly timely for students about to graduate.
